NEPAL LAW SOCIETY

Brief about the Election Update (4)

This brief has been prepared in order to share the election related activities, procedures and rules in the run up to the second Constituent Assembly (CA). The first edition of the brief was launched on April 10, 2013. We will be covering a gist of poll-related activities and incidents under prescribed headings in a periodic manner.

1. Activities of Political Parties

With the announcement of the date of fresh elections, the political parties have intensified their activities and are adopting the campaign mode. The Unified Communist Party of Nepal (UCPN) is holding a crucial meeting of their central committee to bring about changes in the composition of their top office-bearers. The UCPN leadership has been stating that most of their top leaders will stand in election from Terai region. There has been a noticeable trend of switching parties by some local leaders in what appear as election-motivated steps. The CPN-UML and Nepali Congress, too, have stepped up efforts of campaigning.

The High Level Political Committee that has the four major political forces including UCPN-Maoists, NC, CPN-UML and United Democratic Madhesi Front recommended the government to take its own decision regarding the election law and fix the date for election after they could not reach an understanding on some of the provisions in the proposed ordinance to amend the CA Member Election Act. Primarily, they could not agree on the provision of minimum threshold percentage to enable a party to be eligible to win in proportional representation system.

However, once the government announced the CA election date as November 19 and issued ordinance by removing changes proposed in the previous act (such as threshold), the HLPC welcomed it and the parties have asked other disgruntled groups to join the election.

2. Activities of Election Commission

After the announcement of election date 19 May 2013 by the government, the Election Commission unveiled election calendar. The calendar is as follows:

Procedure	Time
• Deadline for voters' registration	• Till mid-July

Following the publication of election calendar, the EC called the meeting of major political parties including the disgruntled ones on June 19 to discuss the procedures and timelines. At the meeting, most of the parties expressed their support to the calendar. The Chief Election Commissioner asked the political parties to do whatever they must to ensure that all disputes and issues will be settled by mid-August so that they can proceed with registration of candidates. Any delay in the matter is likely to affect the election process adversely, the CEC told. About 139 political parties are already registered for the election purpose and the detail list of the political parties are in given in Annex-1

3. Activities of Council of Ministers

The meeting of the Council of Ministers on May 13 decided that the second election of Constituent Assembly will be held on November 19, 2013. The same meeting also passed the ordinance to amend the CA Member Election Act, which was subsequently endorsed by the president. With its endorsement, all necessary election laws are now in place.

As the political parties could not reach an understanding on the changes proposed by the Election Commission in the draft ordinance (such as insertion of minimum threshold for election under PR; declaration of property by candidates etc), the government adopted the ordinance by removing those changes and holding on to the legal provisions that were practiced in the previous CA election.

Subsequent to the announcement of election date and issuance of necessary election laws, chairman of Council of Ministers, Mr. Khila Raj Regmi addressed the nation. He appealed for support to election from each and everyone. He also appealed the disgruntled parties to join the talks and take part in the election. He expressed full commitment of the government to hold election in free and fair manner. He also attempted to allay fears among some quarters that his appointment as the chairman of Council of Ministers might undermine the principle of separation of power since he is also Chief Justice of Supreme Court. He said that he has disconnected himself from the task of justice dispensation and, therefore, the fears regarding separation of power need not arise.

The government continues its efforts to reach out to the disgruntled groups. The talks with the Ashok Rai-led Federal Socialist Party and Upendra Yadav-led Madhesi Janadhikar Forum, Nepal have been going on. However, the Mohan Baidya-led CPN-Maoist has stayed out of negotiation process.

4. Election Related Violence

Three major parties (Baidya-led CPN Maoist, Federal Socialist Party and Madhesi Janadhikar Forum Nepal) and a few dozen of smaller parties under their alliance have been voicing their protest against the election on various grounds.

They have vehemently opposed the announcement of election date without taking them into confidence.

Reacting to the announcement of poll date, these disgruntled parties organized Nepal Bandh on June 16. Though there were reports of sporadic violence and vandalism of vehicles, the bandh passed off largely peacefully.

The parties have, however, warned that they will come up with series of protest programs in future. While Federal Socialist Party and MJF Nepal have hinted that they could agree on some form of compromise if number of seats allocated for PR system could be increased; the Baidya-led Maoists are adamant that the current government should go and be replaced by government of political parties. Nevertheless, the government as well as the major parties under the HLPC have vowed to carry on their initiatives to reach out to these parties for amicable settlement.

5. Election Observation

The General Election Observation Committee (GEOC) has started long-term observation. It will appoint 55 national level observers. The GEOC has decided to observe election in 55 out of 75 districts. The districts are yet to be identified. Once the districts are identified, the VDCs and municipalities level observers will be selected. Altogether, there will be over 8000 observers from GEOC.

Schedule-3

(Relating to sub-section (3) of Section 58)

Result Divisor Method

According to the Result Divisor Method, the votes cast for each political party shall be divided serially according to the divisor method. According to this method, the votes secured by each Political Party shall be divided by many divisors (for example 1. 4, 3, 5, 7, 9 etc.). The result of such division is called quotient. After deriving quotient, the number of seats shall be allocated by dividing smaller ones from greater quotient until the seats are finalized. In making such allocation, even though a Political Party secures any votes whatsoever, the seats to be secured by such Political Party shall be allocated by being limited to the number of candidates enlisted by such Party in the list.

Example: If thirteen seats are to be allocated amongst five Political Parties, allocation shall be made as follows according to the results of votes secured by such Political Party.
